Jacob Huereca is currently the Chief Executive Officer for Connections Individual and Family Services in New Braunfels, Texas. Prior to joining Connections, Jacob was the Executive Director at New Life Children's Center and has spent the majority of his career working with children in foster care. Jacob received his undergraduate social work degree from Colorado State University-Pueblo and his Master's degree in social work from The University of Texas at Austin. Jacob studied Community and Administrative Leadership with a focus on non-profit management and has a strong passion for organizational science and culture. Jacob recently became an Andeavor Fellow through the San Antonio Area Foundation and is a graduate of the 2020 class of New Braunfels Leadership.

Jacob is a licensed social worker, licensed childcare administrator, and a Trust Based Relationship Educator. Jacob has volunteered his time teaching trauma informed care practices in working with children from hard places for many years at Gateway Church in Austin prior to moving to New Braunfels in 2016. Currently, Jacob volunteers for the local New Braunfels Youth soccer league as both a coach and age group commissioner. Jacob previously was a Rotarian and board member at the Community Resource and Recreation Center, a non-profit in the Canyon Lake Community.

Jacob is the father of 6 children, has been a foster parent on two separate occasions and has two adopted children. Jacob is originally from Las Vegas, Nevada but considers Texas home! He loves his faith, to fish, and to get outdoors and spend time with his family.

Dr. Dixie Van Eynde has served on the Greene and Associates, Inc. team since the business began. She is integral to supporting our diverse clients. As a counseling psychologist specializing in career and leadership development and executive coaching she integrates her deep assessment background with her communication expertise to accelerate behavior change. She has been engaged in development programs beginning in 1993 as a feedback specialist and coach using models and leadership assessments, participants were from a variety of organizations and industries both domestic and international.

Dixie worked in higher education for two university counseling centers. Cooperatively with Career Services, she coached students regarding career exploration and decision making, providing career assessment/feedback, and career workshops and seminars. Her involvement in leadership development and executive coaching has flowed naturally from her interest in career development. She is certified in at least ten assessment instruments and able to use numerous others by connecting them to the framework of assessments she regularly employs. Her gift is to make the information both meaningful and useful to clients as they consider their options during career turning points or their leadership skills, impacts and visions. Her executive coaching clients have benefitted from her strategic approach to forging strong team relationships and to becoming more influential contributors in their organizational roles. Her ability to bridge self-knowledge as leaders to application in business accelerates the leaders' impact to organizations. She has worked with leaders in diverse industries including railroad, grocery, health care, real estate development, semi-conductor and utilities.

Dr. VanEynde received her doctorate from Teachers College, Columbia University, and an MA in Speech Communication and Human Relations from the University of Kansas.
