What is the role of the leader today beyond being the expert? Traditionally, leaders are called upon to convey their knowledge. In today's ever changing environment leaders need to add a new role, the role of coach. Using a coach approach verses an old-style of a bossy approach contributes to creating an engaged workforce. In addition, the organization conveys the importance of accountability and development. During this interactive learning session participants will focus on utilizing a coach approach that they can integrate everyday into their jobs to improve performance.

This session will emphasize two core skills of coaching based on the definition of coaching.

Coaching: a collaborative process between the coach and an employee for the purpose of employee development, strengthening the supervisor-employee relationship, and achieving business objectives.
